Honouring our Police

The Northern Territory Police Minister Paul Henderson has paid tribute to current and former police officers at the annual National Police Remembrance Day service at St Mary’s Cathedral in Darwin.

Mr Henderson said National Police Remembrance Day is a chance to recognise the work of all police officers.

“Police make a significant contribution to protecting Territorians and our community and often put their lives on the line,” he said

“Today’s ecumenical service gives us the opportunity to remember officers killed while serving the Territory. Thankfully no police officers lost their lives in the past year.

“Today is also a chance to recognise those still on the frontline.

“Police officers commit to a very important career serving and protecting all Territorians.

“The job can be difficult, challenging and on occasions dangerous. But it can also be very satisfying and rewarding.

“For the service all police officers provide to the Northern Territory community, I thank each and every one of them on behalf of all Territorians.”
