Central Australia is a big winner from the 2015-16 Budget.

The Budget invests in the future with strong infrastructure spending to unlock the full potential of the region.

This budget sets the foundation for Central Australia to grow and prosper with significant investment in economic and community infrastructure projects that create jobs and makes Central Australia an even better place to live.

The local economy is already showing positive signs of recovery with renewed confidence in town.

This is being driven by a raft of major projects already underway including the new Supreme Court, the refurbishment of the Greatorex building, the development of Kilgariff, the South Terrace townhouse project, the redevelopment of the Melanka site, the Chandler salt mine and Virgin Airlines flying into Alice Springs.

This budget will build on that momentum and help take the Central Australia to the next level with better roads, improved early child care and health facilities, expanded tourism infrastructure and upgrades to key sporting facilities.

We know that in the years ahead, the Central Australian economy will tilt towards tourism as a key driver and we are preparing for that shift now by investing in the products and infrastructure the industry needs.

Budget 2015 delivers a $25 million project to complete the final 43 kilometre seal of the Mereenie Inner Loop between Hermannsburg and Glen Helen over two years.

Tourism NT estimates an annual economic benefit from sealing this road of $16.25 million, as visitors stay longer and spend more.

Budget 2015 includes $9.53 million for new early childhood facilities in Alice Springs including $5.5 million to build a Child and Family Centre at Larapinta Primary School and $4.03 million for a new pre-school facility at Braitling Primary School.

This is fantastic news for Alice Springs families, boosting the child care options available for busy local parents and increasing the support available for their children’s development.

School safety is also important and the Budget includes $1.5 million to construct a new off-street school bus interchange.

Budget 2015 includes $5.5 million for Larapinta Child and Family Centre.
