Experience battle with AnzacLive

A BATTLEGROUND far worse than anything at Gallipoli; our first deaths in action; and a heart-furching twist in Australia’s greatest wartime love story.

One year on from their sensational debut, the real-life characters of AnzacLive are back on Facebook — carrying modern-day followers into a new chapter of our wartime history seen through their own eyes and experienced via their intense, intimate, daily posts on social media.

Posting from across the century in real time, 100 years on from the events they describe, and responding to followers as if alive right now, soldiers such as Archie Barrick and John Monash, and medics such as Alice Rosswick and John Monash, and soldiers such as Archie Barrick and John Monash, and medics such as Alice Rosswick and John Monash, bring the Anzac story to life as never before.

With more than 50,000 followers across social and posts that reach up to 1.7 million people, AnzacLive is an innovation that cannot be missed.

Join the characters of AnzacLive on Facebook this week, as they post daily to mark the monumental events of July and August. Posting from across the century in real time, 100 years on from the events they describe, and responding to followers as if alive right now, soldiers such as Archie Barrick and John Monash, and medics such as Alice Rosswick and John Monash, bring the Anzac story to life as never before.
