Improving on Public Service – Have Your Say

Time is running out for Territorians to have their say about a review of the Public Sector Employment and Management Act.

Minister for Public Employment Rob Knight said a discussion paper has been prepared and we want Territorians to have their say.

“The Act has been in place for 15-years and in many ways it defines what the public sector stands for and how it operates, Mr Knight said.

“The Northern Territory continues to grow and move forward, and while the Act has served the public sector and the community well, the Territory Government feels it is time it is reviewed.

“We want fresh ideas on how we want the public sector to be in the decades to come.

“The paper has been distributed to all Northern Territory Public Sector employees, Government agencies and other interested parties for comment.”

The Review of the Act is one aspect of a broad reform and revitalisation agenda which includes biennial staff surveys and a review of the Northern Territory Public Sector wages policy.

“There is great work and creativity which is vital to the economic and social development of the NT.

“This Reform and Revitalisation agenda is aimed at ensuring we are ready for the future.

“The Review is targeted for completion by March 31 this year and I encourage public comment.”
