State, Territory and Commonwealth Housing Ministers are meeting in Sydney tomorrow.

Minister for Public and Affordable Housing, Chris Burns, said a range of important housing matters will be on the table.

“There are a range of housing programs being implemented across the nation and we’re discussing their progress,” Dr Burns said.

“Meeting housing demand presents challenges for all jurisdictions and we will be looking at a range of initiatives that are in place to address these.

“The Territory is continuing work with the Commonwealth to implement the massive construction program under the $60 million housing stimulus fund.

“This is delivering more public, transitional, affordable, emergency and short term accommodation for Territorians.

“We are also progressing the Homelessness National Partnership Agreement across the Territory.

“We’ll be looking at further ways to increase housing supply across the nation and how these two initiatives are helping deliver more places for people to live.

“The Territory Government is delivering a range of housing programs to address the needs of Territorians.

“This includes building more public housing, revamping HOMESTART NT and delivering more affordable housing options,” Dr Burns said.
