Email to staff proves jobs are at risk

An email to all Northern Territory Public Servants today clearly outlines that there are moves to slash and burn jobs.

Leader of the Opposition Delia Lawrie said Chief Minister Terry Mills is continuing a silent war on jobs and has broken a promise he made to public servants before the election.

“Terry Mills said before the election ‘your job is safe’ and he personally guaranteed it,” Ms Lawrie said.

“Now weeks after the election public servants are being told by email only permanent non executive employees are safe.

“Thousands of people that don’t fit into this category are at risk of losing their job.

“The rest are only safe until next August when the new Public Sector Enterprise Bargaining Agreement is determined.”
