Territorians remember Bali horror

Opposition Leader Delia Lawrie said today marks a significant moment in our Nation’s history.

“Ten years ago, the unspeakable horror of Terrorism hit our closest neighbours and 202 people lost their lives, including 88 Australians,” Ms Lawrie said.

“Today is a day to reflect and remember those who lost their lives and received horrific injuries and to express our heartfelt sympathy to those who lost loved ones.

“I’m sure all Territorians remember where they were or what they were doing this time ten years ago when the tragic news hit home.

“Bali has long been a popular holiday destination for Territorians, and as the dust settled, concerns turned to the devastating effect this would have on our neighbours who rely so heavily on tourism to survive.

“Over the past ten years, Indonesians have shown incredible strength and resilience and our relationship with Indonesia is stronger than ever.

“Ten years on, many people are still feeling the hurt and anger of what occurred, and I only hope that the coming together of those affected by the tragedy can bring some sort of peace and support on this difficult day.

“Many thanks go to the brave Territorians at St John Ambulance and Royal Darwin Hospital who worked so diligently to care for the injured.”
