Attorney-General and Minister for Justice

STATEMENT: Royal Commission into Child Protection and Youth Detention

3 August 2016

There have been numerous media enquiries to my office in relation to issues arising from the Four Corners report on Monday, July 25.

There are many misconceptions in the media and the broader community that I will be pleased to address at the appropriate time.

The Royal Commission is the proper forum for these topics of considerable public interest to be examined and I will co-operate fully.

There’s also a civil action before the courts. As the Attorney-General it’s inappropriate for me to comment at this time.
