Fight to save the Davis Cup

LEO SCHLINK

THE future of the Davis Cup, one of the pillars of international tennis, hangs in the balance as Tennis Australia fights a desperate rearguard action to save the historic competition.

The International Tennis Federation wants to revamp the tournament, reducing the world's largest annual team's event into a one-week contest annually in one city.

The move has polarised the tennis community, horrifying traditionalists who point to the 118-year-old competition's rich history.

Australia has won the competition 28 times. Tennis Australia is vehemently opposed to the radical revamp and will vote against the amendments at ITF's annual general meeting in Orlando this week, accusing the sport's peak governing body of a lack of transparency.

Tennis Europe, a regional governing body representing 50 member nations, will also oppose the plans to diminish the Davis Cup into an 18-team contest to be held in November next year.

The ITF needs a two-thirds majority to carry the amendment. Ahead of the vote, it is believed the minority is still greater than 33 per cent.

The ATP Player Council, led by Novak Djokovic and Kevin Anderson, voted 9-0 against the proposed format, instead supporting the TA-backed World Team Cup, which will be staged in Australia from January 2020.

Neale Fraser, Australia's longest-serving Davis Cup captain, flew to London in June to meet ITF president David Haggerty in an unsuccessful attempt to sway the American from pursuing changes which would kill off the Cup.

Lleyton Hewitt and every Australian Cup player apart from Mark Woodforde, who sits on the ITF board, against the planned change. Paul McNamee, member of Cup-winning Australian outfits, will attend the ITF meeting as an International Club observer and doesn't buy suggestions awarding the Davis Cup to winners of the new format will validate it.

"They can say that as much as they like," McNamee said. "But (after three-set matches over one week) that is not the Davis Cup they've won."

"I believe the five-set home-and-away format of Davis Cup all the way to the final is non-negotiable."

"As otherwise, it will be spell the death of Davis Cup." Apart from the ATP Player Council, a host of leading players, are aghast at the move to destroy the equivalent of Test cricket.

French players, dismayed by their federation's intention to vote for the change, are prepared to boycott future ties.

Greyhounds back at Winnellie

AFTER a bumper Darwin Cup night when officials estimated a crowd of over 1000 saw Top End trainer Steele Bolton's Crocodile Crush record a memorable victory, greyhound racing returns to Winnellie Park tonight.

Russell Savige has a strong say in the feature race seven $1750 Holdfast Insurance Brokers Sprint, with Yaringa Lass and Bye Felicia engaged. Young trainer Harry Brown has No Humbug racing well without winning, and he appears to have a golden chance to break through out of box eight in race one. Race two looks competitive with a number of chances, including Choice Way (Jamie Hosking) who has had a change of kennels recently.

Woody One for Nathan Toms can also run well. Both Vunivalu (Brad Yates) and Mudzy (Tim Mullany) are going well enough to give race three a real shake if they bring their best form.

Mileeka (Simon Nathanael) should be suited with the wider draw and warrants respect in race four. Graeme Ferns will be looking for strong showings from his charges Hawk Glide and Swansee, and both have undeniable chances in race five.

It should be a good-quality grade four race six.

Heartbreak Hotel (Chris Blackman) has the ability to go well and box one appears ideal. Big Stink (Brian Kelleher) on his most recent efforts gives you the indication the extra distance should suit him in race eight. Andrew Lasker would be hoping for a solid showing from Bombay Rock and box eight looks ideal in race nine.

There is an abundance of speed in race 10, with a fresh Vampire Wish (Hosking) capable of a bold showing.

The flying Arnhem Mayhem steps out in race 11.
