Parliament resumes for three days

The Legislative Assembly will resume for three days of Sittings this week, Leader of Government Business Paul Henderson said.

“A number of important debates will restart after the February Sittings, including debate on the Government’s five-year plan for building healthier communities, and on Government initiatives to reduce crime for a safer Northern Territory,” Mr Henderson said.

Legislation due to be passed this week includes the Fire and Emergency Services Amendment Act to update and strengthen laws covering incident management to better reflect the modern practices of the NT Fire and Rescue Service.

“Parliament will also debate the Radiation Protection Bill, which would give Territorians and the environment the same level of protection against radiation provided nationally and internationally,” said Mr Henderson.

Parliament resumes on Tuesday.
