TOYNE’S DEPARTURE: TIME FOR LABOR MEMBERS TO SHOW SOME TICKER

Opposition Leader, Jodeen Carney, said that the departure of Peter Toyne is an opportunity for Labor members of Parliament to show some ticker when a Cabinet reshuffle takes place on Friday.

Matthew Bonson wrote a memo in June, attacking the Chief Minister’s performance in the Indigenous Affairs portfolio. It was reportedly leaked by Alison Anderson, after a clash with Clare Martin.

He wrote that he was concerned “at the level of misunderstanding and even hate toward the Chief Minister”.

“If Bonson meant what he said, he and his colleagues now have the chance to do something about it”, Ms Carney said.

In his memo, Matthew Bonson said:

“…we, as a group, as individuals and as a government have grown politically and practically to a point it is now time to consider Elliot McAdam or Marion Scrymgour as Minister for Indigenous Affairs”.

His ‘group of 5’ can now do something about their frustration. Bonson and his colleagues will lack any credibility if they don’t show some ticker on Friday”, Ms Carney said.