Sister makes plea for help to find brother

ALICE Springs residents can learn more about the draft Alice Springs Regional Land Use Plan at a community information session on Monday.

NT Planning Commission members will be present to answer questions and concerns. Commission chairman Gary Nairn said talking with the community was key to understanding needs and issues.

“We are holding street stalls around Alice Springs next month as well as meeting with interested groups from the community,” he said. The draft plan focused on sustainable economic and community growth, and important environmental issues, he said.

The draft plan establishes an overarching regional framework to manage growth in anticipation rather than in retrospect,” he said.

The information session will be held from 5.30pm to 6.30pm at the town council offices.

Do the NT campaign now up in air

ALICE Springs tourism business Outback Ballooning will build a new ‘Do the NT’ hot air balloon that will promote the Territory interstate and help establish the Red Centre as the ballooning capital of Australia.

Chief Minister Adam Giles (the NT) “I want to see the Red Centre become the ballooning capital of Australia.”

Award acclaim for developments

The Urban Development Institute of Australia NT has recognised some of this year’s most innovative property developments. Breezes Muirhead won both the masterplanned developments and environmental excellence categories at the annual awards ceremony, while the Tomanos Group won the high-density housing award for the Kube on Cavanagh apartment building.

The Makrylos Group was recognised in the medium-density housing category for the Ariege residence at Stuart Park.

Venture Housing won the affordable housing category.

Invite to learn more about plan

ALICE Springs residents can learn more about the draft Alice Springs Regional Land Use Plan at a community information session on Monday.

NT Planning Commission members will be present to answer questions and concerns. Commission chairman Gary Nairn said talking with the community was key to understanding needs and issues.

“We are holding street stalls around Alice Springs next month as well as meeting with interested groups from the community,” he said. The draft plan focused on sustainable economic and community growth, and important environmental issues, he said.

The draft plan establishes an overarching regional framework to manage growth in anticipation rather than in retrospect,” he said.

The information session will be held from 5.30pm to 6.30pm at the town council offices.

March for awareness on climate

A CLIMATE change march will be held on Saturday afternoon at the Waterfront as world leaders prepare to meet in Paris for the United Nations climate summit.

Leading the rally will be Seed Indigenous Youth Climate Network NT spokesman Clayton Simpson.

“As young First Peoples we contribute the very least to the current unhealthy state of our land and water,” he said. “Too often we are the generation left to pick up the pieces because the issue affects all of us.”

“Murtle the Turtle” will be marching to raise awareness of the threat posed by increased temperatures to sea turtles.

KIERAN BANKS

A WOMAN desperately wants to find her brother who she last saw in a photo published in the NT News.

Victorian woman Lois Broad took to social media this week in a bid to find answers in the search for her brother Darren who she last spoke to in 2012.

At first, she thought it wasn’t unusual to not hear from Darren – she would usually speak with him every six months.

However, as time went on she became concerned about his safety.

Calls to Darwin homeless shelters and NT Police had failed to show up any sign of his brother.

She said Darren moved from Adelaide to Darwin in 2005.

Ms Broad last spoke to Darren in 2012.

Ms Broad read a story in the NT News in May 2014, which pictured Darren leading a campaign calling for Darwin City Council to install more public toilets.

“Before that story it was a good while since I had seen him because he used to always ring and keep in touch and stay in contact. I don’t know what happened in that time,” she said.

However, Ms Broad believes Darren’s tent was set on fire and he was the victim of an assault while camping near the Dusk Pond shortly after the story was published.

“My son was talking to people that he knew up there and someone reckoned he got bashed and they burnt him out of his camp,” she said.

She said Darren was friendly and easy to talk to.

“She’s talkative and very approachable and likes having a chat. I want to know where he is and to know he is OK.”

She said the social media post was yet to show up any positive signs.

As another Christmas comes closer, Ms Broad said the time without knowing where Darren was had started to play on her emotions.

“I’m emotional when I see homeless people because I think of him and when I see them, that’s someone’s brother and sister,” she said.

Ms Broad said she would make an official missing persons report if there continued to be no sign of Darren.

Do the NT campaign now up in air

ALICE Springs tourism business Outback Ballooning will build a new ‘Do the NT’ hot air balloon that will promote the Territory interstate and help establish the Red Centre as the ballooning capital of Australia.

Chief Minister Adam Giles (the NT) “I want to see the Red Centre become the ballooning capital of Australia.”

Award acclaim for developments

THE Urban Development Institute of Australia NT has recognised some of this year’s most innovative property developments. Breezes Muirhead won both the masterplanned developments and environmental excellence categories at the annual awards ceremony, while the Tomanos Group won the high-density housing award for the Kube on Cavanagh apartment building.

The Makrylos Group was recognised in the medium-density housing category for the Ariege residence at Stuart Park.

Venture Housing won the affordable housing category.

March for awareness on climate

A CLIMATE change march will be held on Saturday afternoon at the Waterfront as world leaders prepare to meet in Paris for the United Nations climate summit.

Leading the rally will be Seed Indigenous Youth Climate Network NT spokesman Clayton Simpson.

“As young First Peoples we contribute the very least to the current unhealthy state of our land and water,” he said. “Too often we are the generation left to pick up the pieces because the issue affects all of us.”

“Murtle the Turtle” will be marching to raise awareness of the threat posed by increased temperatures to sea turtles.

KIERAN BANKS

A WOMAN desperately wants to find her brother who she last saw in a photo published in the NT News.

Victorian woman Lois Broad took to social media this week in a bid to find answers in the search for her brother Darren who she last spoke to in 2012.

At first, she thought it wasn’t unusual to not hear from Darren – she would usually speak with him every six months.

However, as time went on she became concerned about his safety.

Calls to Darwin homeless shelters and NT Police had failed to show up any sign of his brother.

She said Darren moved from Adelaide to Darwin in 2005.

Ms Broad last spoke to Darren in 2012.

Ms Broad read a story in the NT News in May 2014, which pictured Darren leading a campaign calling for Darwin City Council to install more public toilets.

“Before that story it was a good while since I had seen him because he used to always ring and keep in touch and stay in contact. I don’t know what happened in that time,” she said.

However, Ms Broad believes Darren’s tent was set on fire and he was the victim of an assault while camping near the Dusk Pond shortly after the story was published.

“My son was talking to people that he knew up there and someone reckoned he got bashed and they burnt him out of his camp,” she said.

She said Darren was friendly and easy to talk to.

“She’s talkative and very approachable and likes having a chat. I want to know where he is and to know he is OK.”

She said the social media post was yet to show up any positive signs.

As another Christmas comes closer, Ms Broad said the time without knowing where Darren was had started to play on her emotions.

“I’m emotional when I see homeless people because I think of him and when I see them, that’s someone’s brother and sister,” she said.

Ms Broad said she would make an official missing persons report if there continued to be no sign of Darren.