CHIEF MINISTER’S MESSAGE

Indigenous Territorians represent more than 30% of the Northern Territory’s total population. Yet across virtually all indicators, wide gaps remain in outcomes between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Territorians. Indigenous Territorians have poorer health outcomes, are less likely to succeed in school, are less likely to be employed and are far more likely to be the victims or perpetrators of crime. Furthermore, Indigenous children are over-represented as victims of child abuse and neglect.

The Northern Territory Government is committed to overcoming the disadvantage experienced by Indigenous Territorians. I am confident that implementing Closing the Gap will bring about dramatic changes for the Territory’s Indigenous population within the next 5 years. Importantly, Closing the Gap will also improve the lives of the next generation of Indigenous Territorians, who we hope will never experience the same levels of poverty and dysfunction that has existed in many of our remote communities for a long time.

To achieve these changes we will need a partnership between governments and Indigenous people and a willingness for all parties to consult and accept their responsibilities to create a better future.

Clare Martin – Chief Minister of the Northern Territory

INTRODUCTION

Closing the Gap is the Northern Territory’s Indigenous generational plan of action, aimed at closing the gap in outcomes between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Territorians. It contains a vision and objectives for the future socio-economic wellbeing of Indigenous Territorians and sets ambitious but achievable targets for the next 5, 10 and 20 years. It also identifies areas for action in the next 5 years, based on the best available evidence of which actions will be most effective in closing the gap.

On 15 June 2007, the Board of Inquiry into the Protection of Aboriginal Children from Sexual Abuse (the Inquiry) released its findings. The Inquiry report included 97 recommendations across 22 themes, addressing the child protection system, as well as broader social and economic factors including housing, unemployment, offender rehabilitation, health, alcohol misuse and education.

A clear and main message from the Inquiry report is that a long term commitment to overcoming Indigenous disadvantage is needed to address the underlying social and environmental factors contributing to child sexual abuse. The other message is that a partnership between the government and Indigenous people is essential to future success. An Indigenous Affairs Advisory Council of senior Indigenous leaders, as well as local community boards will provide the consultation mechanism to ensure plans are appropriate for local conditions and that Indigenous people are aware of their obligations and responsibilities in overcoming Indigenous disadvantage.

While the Northern Territory Government supports the messages and recommendations of the Inquiry, additional areas need to be addressed if we are to overcome Indigenous disadvantage within a generation. Closing the Gap goes beyond the recommendations of the Inquiry to address additional areas of: legislative reform, governance, employment and economic development, remote area policing, health, housing, communication and engagement. Closing the Gap also establishes a comprehensive framework for implementation of this long term generational approach, for negotiating complementary long term plans with the Australian Government, and consulting and negotiating with Indigenous people regarding their responsibilities and obligations to build a better future for their children.

Appendix 1 details the Northern Territory Government response to each recommendation of the Inquiry. These responses reflect the need for a long term generational approach to overcoming Indigenous disadvantage, and as such go beyond the recommendations themselves.

In April 2002, the Council of Australian Governments commissioned a national report against key indicators of Indigenous disadvantage, titled the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage report. This report, released every two years, assesses the degree of Indigenous disadvantage in each state and territory of Australia, across a number of strategic areas for action as well as key indicators. In this way, governments can evaluate whether policies, programs and interventions are achieving positive outcomes for Indigenous people. For each of the objective areas in Closing the Gap, the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage indicators have been used as a basis for setting targets. Closing the Gap objectives and action areas can also be related back to the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage strategic areas for action (see Figure 1, page 7). Closing the Gap seeks to address the gaps identified in the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage report.

VISION

By 2030, Indigenous children born in the Territory will be as healthy and live as long as other Territorians. They will have the opportunity to participate fully in the social and economic life of the Territory, while having a strong cultural identity.

OBJECTIVES

- Safety Ensure personal and community safety through a strong child protection system, effective alcohol and drug management, adequate policing, youth development and juvenile diversion programs and the engagement of the community in developing local solutions to crime and family violence.
• Health
Provide the opportunity for a healthy lifestyle through a focus on early childhood health and development, preventative health, sporting and recreational activities and primary health care programs.

• Housing
Provide families with safe, affordable and appropriate housing and access to essential services including power, water and sewerage.

• Education
Provide children with a good start to life through preschool and early education programs in preparation for school, and access to high quality primary, secondary and tertiary education.

• Jobs
Provide adults with opportunities through supporting the provision of local jobs to local people, increasing Indigenous employment in the Northern Territory Public Sector, enhancing literacy, numeracy and vocational skills and supporting economic activity in the bush.

• Culture

• A better way of doing business
Work towards the engagement of Indigenous Territorians in policy and service delivery in areas affecting them, helping them meet their obligations and responsibilities in building a better future for their children.

A FRAMEWORK FOR ACTION
The following pages provide an overview of the Northern Territory Government’s generational plan of action to address Indigenous disadvantage. For each objective area, there is a brief description of the gap between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Territorians, as identified in the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage report, followed by a summary of the approach to be taken to address this gap. A series of 5, 10 and 20 year targets have also been developed, based on recognised indicators of Indigenous disadvantage from the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage report. In addition, key actions for the Northern Territory Government for the next 5 years have been listed.
The Northern Territory Government has committed $286.43 million towards these 5 year actions to implement Closing the Gap. This commitment includes:

- $79.36 million for child protection
- $38.61 million to implement the Remote Area Policing Strategy, community justice and other safety measures
- $10.11 million for alcohol and drug management
- $23.4 million to achieve better health outcomes
- $42.32 million for housing in Indigenous communities
- $70.68 million towards education
- $13 million to improve Indigenous employment and economic development
- $8.95 million towards better cross-cultural understanding and engagement in service delivery.

In determining where these resources should be located, consideration has been given to community need depending upon size and remoteness. Government services will be more extensive in larger communities and they in turn will service smaller surrounding communities. There has also been a focus on ensuring core services (i.e. police, health, education) are delivered in these communities in an integrated manner.

The Northern Territory Government is seeking the Australian Government’s support for the long term approach outlined in Closing the Gap. For each of the objective areas, recent Australian Government initiatives have been identified, as well as some areas for negotiation with the Australian Government to attain a long term commitment to addressing Indigenous disadvantage that goes beyond the Intervention currently underway.

Local government is also an important partner to Closing the Gap, with strong local governance frameworks essential to success. Local government reform in the Territory is expected to provide these strong local governance frameworks, in the form of shire councils and local community boards. The new local government arrangements will provide economies of scale; underpin stronger management structures; increase the focus on local Indigenous employment; and provide a voice for local communities. Community boards will also provide an important avenue for negotiating strong partnerships between communities and government.

The Northern Territory Government is also seeking the support and commitment of Indigenous and non-Indigenous Territorians to work together in overcoming Indigenous disadvantage. Indigenous Territorians can assist in implementing the actions under Closing the Gap by committing to supporting school attendance, working with police to stamp out violence and substance misuse, adopting preventative health measures, accessing health services regularly, identifying opportunities and participating in economic development and working with governments to develop and implement policies and programs for Indigenous people.
The private, commercial and industry sectors can also contribute significantly to Closing the Gap by increasing Indigenous employment and encouraging economic development in remote communities. Non-Indigenous Territorians have a role, through learning about Indigenous culture and history and promoting cross cultural awareness and mutual respect.

For Closing the Gap to be effective, it needs to be a partnership between the three tiers of government (Federal, Territory and Local), which have resources and responsibility for service delivery, together with Indigenous Territorians who have the responsibility and obligation to provide a better future for their children.

IMPLEMENTATION AND REVIEW

The following mechanisms will be established to oversee the implementation of Closing the Gap:

- An Indigenous Affairs Advisory Council will be established, comprising Indigenous leaders, representatives from Indigenous organisations and peak bodies. This group will advise government on issues affecting Indigenous Territorians, facilitate community input and participation in Closing the Gap and oversee its implementation. It is expected that this group will also be involved in developing future versions of Closing the Gap, including identifying further targets and actions for the next 10, 15 and 20 years.

- An Operational Group comprised of Deputy Chief Executives from relevant Northern Territory Government agencies with responsibility for Indigenous programs, and responsible to the Chief Executives Taskforce on Indigenous Affairs, will be established to drive the implementation of Closing the Gap across the Northern Territory Government. This group will report 6 monthly to the Chief Minister and Cabinet on progress. Cross-agency working groups for each of the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage strategic areas for action will also be established, reporting back to the Operational Group. These working groups will focus on integrating agency action and implementing cross-agency initiatives.

- The Northern Territory Government will use the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage report, together with Northern Territory Government agency annual and performance reports, as a basis for assessing progress against Closing the Gap. These reports will be reviewed by the Indigenous Affairs Advisory Council and the Operational Group and relevant information collated into a biennial report on progress under Closing the Gap.
LEGISLATIVE REFORM

In order to achieve the vision and objectives of Closing the Gap, legislative reform will be required. This includes, but is not limited to the following:

• Introduction of the Care and Protection of Children Bill into Legislative Assembly Sittings in August 2007, to replace the Community Welfare Act and to provide for the Children’s Commissioner and other child protection measures

• Introduction of the Local Government Amendment Bill into Legislative Assembly Sittings in August 2007, to allow for transition to new local government arrangements

• Introduction of the Local Government Amendment Bill (2) and the revised Local Government Act in late 2007 to embed the new local government arrangements

• Under the amendments passed to the Liquor Act in 2006, declaration of Dry Areas, commencing with Alice Springs on 1 August 2007 and progressing to other areas during 2007

• Introduction of amendments to the Liquor Act into Legislative Assembly Sittings in August 2007 to provide power to the Minister for Racing, Gaming and Licensing to implement urgent liquor supply measures, to implement alcohol restrictions in town camps and to provide power to police to search vehicles

• Development of legislation to reform the committal system (and thus reduce the involvement of victims of crime in the criminal law system)

• Further reform of the laws of evidence by possible adoption of the national uniform Evidence Bill

This figure illustrates the links between Closing the Gap and the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage report, which measures Indigenous disadvantage nationwide against several strategic areas for action. Closing the Gap is seeking to close the gaps identified in the Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage report. The Overcoming Indigenous Disadvantage report will therefore be used to measure the performance of Closing the Gap in achieving change for Indigenous Territorians.
SAFETY

The Gap: A snapshot of the prison data for 2006 show that approximately 82% of the Territory prison population and 96% of juveniles held in detention are Indigenous. In the Northern Territory in 2005, Indigenous people were four times more likely than non-Indigenous people to be a victim of assault.

The Approach: Personal and community safety are critical concerns for Territorians. To achieve a safe living, working and family environment for Territorians, we need to strengthen the child protection system, tackle the causes of crime and violence (such as alcohol abuse and social dislocation), boost frontline community policing, implement youth development programs and develop local solutions to crime and family violence.

20 YEAR TARGETS

• The proportion of the population drinking beyond safe levels for short term harm will be reduced by 20%

HEALTH

The Gap: Indigenous children in the Territory are more than twice as likely as non-Indigenous children to die before the age of one. Life expectancy at birth is 16 to 20 years lower for Indigenous Territorians than non-Indigenous Territorians. Non-communicable diseases, such as heart disease, diabetes and cancer, account for almost 80% of the gap between Indigenous and non-Indigenous life expectancy, with poor access to primary health care services also responsible for the disparity.

The Approach: Early childhood experiences have a significant impact on health and educational outcomes later in life. Health, growth and development in the first three years in particular are critical, as these are the years of greatest brain development. In order to reduce the gap in life expectancy, chronic disease management and increased access to quality primary health care are essential. Primary health care services in remote Aboriginal communities provide essential clinical services such as emergency care, illness treatment, chronic disease management, preventative care such as immunisation, antenatal care, health screening and follow-up care for emerging health conditions, and specific programs to address the underlying causes of ill health and family dysfunction, such as substance misuse, nutrition and environmental health programs.

20 YEAR TARGETS

• Indigenous children will have life expectancy at birth comparable with non-Indigenous children
• Rates of Indigenous people hospitalised for preventable conditions will be comparable with rates of non-Indigenous people

10 YEAR TARGETS

• The difference between rates of Indigenous and non-Indigenous people hospitalised for preventable conditions will be halved
• Mean birth weight of Indigenous babies will be within 150g of non-Indigenous babies
• The difference between smoking rates for Indigenous and non-Indigenous people will be halved

5 YEAR TARGETS

• Rates of Indigenous infant mortality will be less than 13 per 1000 live births
• More than 25% of Indigenous people will exercise at moderate/high levels

  - Working with the Northern Territory Government and the Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Sector to develop and fund a primary health care strategy and improved service system across the Northern Territory, i.e. to complete the Australian Government’s Primary Health Care Access Program or alternative program to address shortfall in Medicare and Pharmaceutical Benefits Scheme funding to remote Territorians

- Preventative health
  - Support for sport and recreation programs under the Overarching Agreement on Indigenous Affairs – Youth Schedule and the Indigenous Sports Program
HOUSING

The Gap: Nearly a quarter of Indigenous people aged 15 years and over in Australia are living in overcrowded housing. This situation is most pronounced in the Northern Territory, with more than 60% of Indigenous Territorians living in overcrowded conditions. Overcrowded houses are more difficult to maintain and keep clean, and lead to increased likelihood of spread of infection and infectious diseases.

The Approach: Access to adequate housing, infrastructure and essential services provides the basis for healthy families, a healthy lifestyle, strong communities and economic growth. By providing better access to housing, infrastructure and essential services we can improve health, safety, education and employment outcomes.

20 YEAR TARGETS

• Less than 10% of Indigenous Territorians will live in overcrowded conditions
• Rates of home ownership for Indigenous Territorians will increase
• Rates of Indigenous people with diseases associated with poor environmental health will be comparable with rates of non-Indigenous people

10 YEAR TARGETS

• The difference between rates of Indigenous and non-Indigenous people hospitalised with diseases associated with poor environmental health will be will be halved

5 YEAR TARGETS

• The backlog in housing for remote Indigenous Territorians will be reduced by 20%

This will also provide some new housing to address the backlog. Indications are that approximately 50% of this will be allocated to the Territory
  - Funding for provision of furniture and internal fittings to facilitate healthy living practices
- Government employee housing
  - Provision of houses for government employees based in remote communities as a result of increased Australian Government activity
- Negotiate with the Australian Government for a long term commitment to address the backlog of housing for Indigenous people over 20 years. This will require the provision of 200 new houses per year
EDUCATION

The Gap: On average, Indigenous students achieve lower literacy and numeracy levels than other students. In the Northern Territory in 2006, under 40% of Indigenous students achieved the Year 3 reading benchmark, compared with 87% of non-Indigenous students. In 2006, only 13.5% of Northern Territory Certificate of Education recipients were Indigenous.

The Approach: Starting school early, improving attendance rates, providing high quality teaching and leaving school later are essential to improving literacy and numeracy skills and therefore providing a good start in life. Preschool and early education programs have been associated with increased levels of school completion and improved literacy and social skills necessary for school success.

20 YEAR TARGETS

- The rates of achievement of national literacy and numeracy standards for Indigenous students will be comparable with that of non-Indigenous students

JOBS

The Gap: In the Northern Territory in 2001, Indigenous labour force participation rates were lower than 40%, while unemployment was 13.6%. Based on 2001 data, it is estimated that 2000 additional jobs would need to be created per annum for 10 years to lift the Indigenous employment level in the Northern Territory to non-Indigenous levels.

The Approach: Providing opportunities for adults is about ensuring that all Territorians benefit from available jobs, more business and entrepreneurial opportunities, and a higher standard of living. Achieving this objective will require work in adult education and skill training in Indigenous communities, developing and identifying local jobs for local Indigenous people and assisting Indigenous groups to take full advantage of emerging economic opportunities. It will also require a significant commitment from business and industry to increasing Indigenous employment and encouraging economic development in remote regions.

20 YEAR TARGETS

• Labour force participation rates will be similar for Indigenous and non-Indigenous Territorians
• Rates of Indigenous employment in Northern Territory Public Sector (NTPS) will reflect the population demographics of the local region

10 YEAR TARGETS

• Indigenous youth (18 to 24 years) will be engaged in either further study, training or work at rates comparable to non-Indigenous youth
• At least 30% of people completing Vocational Education and Training (VET) qualifications, apprenticeships and traineeships will be Indigenous
• Indigenous labour force participation rates will be more than 60%

• Ensuring capital works programs in remote areas facilitate training and employment of local Indigenous people

CULTURE

The Approach: The Northern Territory benefits from an exceptionally rich cultural heritage. In order to protect and nurture this cultural heritage we need to actively promote the importance of cultural identity, improve cross-cultural understanding and engender mutual respect.

20 YEAR TARGETS

10 YEAR TARGETS

• All Northern Territory Public Sector employees will have accessed a cross-cultural program

A BETTER WAY OF DOING BUSINESS

The Approach: A better way of doing business is about Indigenous Territorians informing the Northern Territory Government of their aspirations and needs, the Northern Territory Government listening and Territorians and the Northern Territory Government taking action together. This relies upon formal structures for communication between communities and government, promoting a more positive dialogue. It also relies on Indigenous Territorians acting in partnership with government and meeting their responsibility to provide a better future for their children.

20 YEAR TARGETS

• Rates of Indigenous employment in the Northern Territory Public Sector will reflect the population demographics of the local region
• Rates of Indigenous teachers/education workers in schools and health workers will reflect the population demographics of the Northern Territory
