YOUNG TERRITORIANS SPEAK UP TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE

April 6, 2013

Young Territory leaders have today spoken on youth issues at one of the Northern Territory’s first National Youth Week events.

Minister for Young Territorians, Peter Styles, joined young member, Kenneth Kadrigamar, to welcome young people to ‘Brunchfest’, a panel discussion about issues affecting youth.

Young Territorians attending the event have the opportunity to put questions to a panel from diverse backgrounds, network with other young people and learn from those who are out there creating change.

“It is wonderful to see the young Territory leaders getting together to discuss issues, share their ideas and learn from each other,” Mr Styles said.

“Brunchfest gives future leaders the opportunity to hear from established community leaders to discuss the vital issues such as self care and how to ask for help when needed.

“More than 25 young people are expected to attend the event to hear each panellist’s leadership journey and learn how to make a difference in the community.”

This is the second annual Brunchfest event held as part of National Youth Week at the Novotel Atrium.

Panel guests included award winning author Barry Jonsberg, Youth Leadership Award finalist Jessica Cullen, Round Table member Isobel Cammarano and former Chief Minister Paul Henderson.

National Youth Week runs from 5 to 14 April.

You can find out what is on in your area by visiting our Youth NT website at www.youth.nt.gov.au.

Media Contact:

Lauren Crawley 0400253341